13	It is great to see seniors take a step further to try and get trainees excited about their specialty. I think that is something that is very easy to lose sight of while in the wards - the workload trumps any kind of idealistic vision one had of his or her job. G4J is a nice reminder that we should never give up on that vision, that our job matters, that we make a difference and that we should take pride in our jobs.	11/6/2017 3:20 PM
14	I found some sessions to be of a basic level but I really enjoyed the day. Some of the poster presentations were excellent and provided some extra knowledge. Has it ever been considered to ask ANP's or other AHP to present posters or sessions? They all seemed to be from medical backgrounds.	11/6/2017 2:42 PM

37	The frailty break out session needed a facilitator... it was poorly led... seemed to be nurses from one hospital telling us the negatives and being quite disrespectful to junior drs ...rather than a focussed discussion about planning for future frailty projects.	11/4/2017 8:38 PM
